The Future of Post-Secondary Education: The Conference Board Study Begins

Dr. Amrhein’s activities as Visiting Executive include conducting research and publishing findings on the future of universities, exploring topics including the structures and role of research-intensive universities, the contribution of universities to innovation and commercialization, the relationships of universities with employers and industry, and convening and working with groups of university leaders and experts to examine university issues and explore options for change. Dr. Amrhein adds:

“The overarching theme of my work throughout my current leave and term with the Conference Board is the role of modern universities in contemporary society, and ways that a productive, high-quality educational experience prepares students – both undergraduate and graduate – to contribute to contemporary society in meaningful ways.”

The emerging third sector in Canadian higher education: The case for polytechnic education

Le nouveau troisième secteur dans l'enseignement supérieur au Canada : le cas de l'enseignement polytechnique

Presented by Nobina Robinson, CEO, Polytechnics Canada/ Le nouveau troisième secteur dans l'enseignement supérieur au Canada : le cas de l'enseignement polytechnique

Introductions Walter Archer, CSSHE President

Mot d'introduction : Walter Archer, président de la SCÉES

In her keynote address, Nobina will unpack the key pedagogical features of polytechnic education in Canada: bachelors degrees offered in a non-university setting, industry-responsive applied research and commercialization that involves students in all programs, and institutions that are still committed to high quality and innovative apprenticeship training. These phenomena break the strict binary division between universities and community colleges in Canada. Governments around the world have enabled colleges to award baccalaureate degrees; the talk will explore the principal motivations for doing so. Growth in industrial applied research that involves undergraduate and other students is also a new trend, building innovation skills of a very practical nature. Canadian polytechnics are leaders in innovations in training for the skilled trades. Differentiation within the Canadian post secondary system can help to achieve higher quality and greater efficiency at a time when there is consensus that more post secondary graduates are needed for Canada's productivity challenges and continued prosperity. A model of education that does not filter human capital but builds it, polytechnic education leads to rewarding careers for growing numbers of the next generation of Canadian highly qualified and skilled workers

Dans son exposé, Nobina Robinson dévoilera les principales caractéristiques pédagogiques de l'enseignement polytechnique au Canada : baccalauréats offerts par un contexte non universitaire, recherche appliquée et commercialisation à l'écoute des besoins de l'industrie dans tous les programmes et établissements accordant toujours de l'importance à l'excellence et à une formation novatrice en apprentissage. Ces phénomènes font disparaître la stricte division binaire entre les universités et les collèges communautaires au Canada. Des gouvernements de par le monde permettent à des collèges de décerner le grade de bachelier; cette causerie en explorera les principales raisons. Le développement de la recherche industrielle appliquée faisant appel à des étudiants, de premier cycle ou autres, représente aussi une nouvelle tendance, qui contribue à l'acquisition de capacités d'innovation d'une nature très pratique. Le secteur de l'enseignement polytechnique au Canada est un chef de file quant aux innovations en formation pour les métiers qualifiés. Une différenciation au sein du système d'enseignement postsecondaire canadien peut contribuer à l'atteinte d'une meilleure qualité et d'une efficacité accrue à un moment où l'on s'entend sur la nécessité d'avoir davantage de diplômés d'établissements postsecondaires pour relever les défis que posent la productivité et le maintien de la prospérité au Canada. Modèle d'enseignement qui ne filtre pas le capital humain, mais le renforce, l'enseignement polytechnique ouvre la porte à des carrières enrichissantes pour un nombre grandissant de personnes faisant partie de la prochaine génération de travailleurs canadiens qualifiés et hautement spécialisés.

Critical Issues Facing Higher Education in Canada Today

Centre for Higher Education Research and Development (CHERD)

Chair/Présidente: Kathleen Matheos, University of Manitoba

The Centre for Higher Education Research and Development (CHERD) has been involved in the changing landscape of higher education in Canada and abroad for over 25 years. CHERD offers a series of university and college leadership and management programs, with flagship institutes offered annually for leaders and administrators. Each year CHERD instructors and associates pull together an environmental scan of the critical issues that impact the university and college sectors in Canada. This comprehensive scan includes key issues identified by course/institute participants (current university and college administrators), observations and findings from current literature. These issues stretch across the institution and impact how we lead, plan, administer and manage, use technology, teach and learn and serve and support our diverse student body in Canadian higher education in the 21st century. This panel presentation brings together CHERD instructors and associates, who will talk about the issues the environmental scan suggests are the most important ones facing higher education in Canada today. The panel will be followed by questions and discussion

Panelists: Marlene R. Atleo, University of Manitoba; Neil Gold, Professor of Law Emeritus, University of Windsor; Glenn Harris, President, Harris-Gray Associates Corp, Vancouver; Valerie Kuehne, University of Victoria.
